

I believe it would be a disaster if the FCC stopped XM satellite radio from broadcasting the important traffic and weather information it provides as a much needed asset. The reason I protest this is the simple fact there is not enough weather information provided in a timely manner. I don't have a weather radio, however, I have XM radio that won't leave me without a signal in the mountains or on open stretches of highway hundreds of miles between towns and broadcast range of regular radio.

You would be doing all of XM radio listeners a disservice and violate my rights to choose who should broadcast the information critical to my well being on the highway.

Dudley Vaughan